2. [REDACTED] consulted Bruce Clarke, Director OSR, who said no strategic missiles would be loaded two to a truck and who added that his people would be in on Sunday for consultation. The OCI duty officer, [REDACTED] was advised of the report and asked if anyone else along the line of command should be consulted. He said not at this point. [REDACTED] of IRS was then consulted to see about getting an overhead photography mission up on Sunday. He used the story that we were interested in the ship that was due in Mariel on 15 January and which was carrying a cargo of military supplies. There was no mission on Sunday due to weather. The mission was reset for Monday and was flown that day.

4. [REDACTED] senior Cuban analyst of OCI meanwhile is checking out the description as to any possible likeness to any known missile -- as had [REDACTED] has also requested, in a normal manner, the copies of photos taken of the ship by CONCLANT in order to look at the deck cargo which may have been carrying [REDACTED] (In my view, the "new type of missile" could possibly be such a tank and bears close scrutiny.)
